The Lease of Willard's Hotel. There was filed yesterday in the Recorder's office a loase from Joseph C. Willard and Henry A. Willard to James H. Breslin, of the city of New York, and Joseph G. Cooke, of Saratoga N. Y., of the property known as Willard's Hotel. The lease commences on January 1, 1879, and is for the term of five years, for the following rental: First year, $15,000; second and succeeding years, $29,000, to be paid in regular monthly installments in advance. The parties of the second part also agree to pay all taxes and assessments and charges of every kind to keep the hotel in good repair, neither changing the name of the house or hall; that they will not assign the base except for such portions as may be necessary for a harber-ship, eiger and newspaper stand, and Willard's Half for ennearis, lectures, and like purposes. They also obligate themselves to keep in good repair the furniture now in the hotel, and that all the additional furniture that may be put there shall remain until the expiration of the lease as security for the rent. In payment of the purchase of the furniture of the house they give four notes, two in favor of Joseph C, and two in favor of Henry A, Willard, and all indorsed by R. M. Taylor, of New York city, payable in twelve and twenty four months, respectively. parties of the second part also agree to pay all
